Report: Trooper attacked with meth needle

Man jailed after leading police on mile-long foot chase

A Danville man faces a host of charges after allegedly trying to stick a Kentucky State Trooper with a loaded methamphetamine needle following lengthy vehicle and foot chase last Thursday afternoon in Lawrenceburg.

Charles Lyens, 40, lead police on an 11-mile road chase before abandoning his vehicle on Highway 44 near Pleasant Grove Ridge Road and taking off on foot, according to police reports.

Lawrenceburg Police officer Clay Crouch and Trooper Jason Woodside chased Lyens for nearly a mile on foot before catching up with him, according to a report filed by Crouch.

"He came at Trooper Burnside with loaded methamphetamine needle," Crouch said in his report. "He was Tased and a hand-to-hand confrontation ensued."

Crouch said afterward that Lyens was injured in the confrontation when he "fell face first into a creek."

Lyens was transported to an area hospital before being taken to the Shelby County Detention Center.

He was arraigned Monday in Anderson District Court and pleaded not guilty to charges that include speeding, not wearing a seat belt, license plate not legible,

Ruling spells trouble for library

Director says no changes planned despite judge's order in Campbell Co.

By Ben Carlson
News staff

The Anderson Public Library won't change the way it sets its local tax rate despite a circuit court judge's ruling that could financially devastate petition-formed libraries statewide, including here. "Until we're told differently we're going to operate the same as we always have," said Pam Mullins, the library's director.

Mullins was responding to questions about a ruling in Campbell County last week in which a judge ordered the library to slash its tax rate from 77 cents per $1,000 of assessed value to 30 cents — the rate the library used when it was formed in 1978.

Circuit Court Judge Julie Reinhardt Ward issued a summary judgment in favor of a group of citizens who sued the library for not following state law when setting its tax rate.

Ward's ruling, which is expected to be appealed, has no immediate impact for the Anderson County library, which was founded by petition in the 1960s and given a 25-cents per thousand rate by the Anderson County Fiscal Court.

If the library there does file an appeal and it is upheld by the Court of Appeals, it would then affect the local public library, pending a possible appeal to the state supreme court.

Unless overturned there, the local library could be

Trucks collide near Running Brook

From staff reports

A white Ford pick-up truck rear ended another pick-up on 127/Alton Road/North Main Street in front of the Running Brook subdivision Friday, with one driver being transported to the hospital for complaints of an elevated heart rate.

Douglas Muller, 49, of Louisville, was transported to Frankfort Regional Medical Center after mentioning his heart rate was up, according to Kentucky State Police Officer Frank Flowers.

Muller allegedly rear ended Shirley D. Long, 68, of Lawrenceburg, as both were driving southeast toward Lawrenceburg on 127/Alton Road/North Main Street.

No one was seriously hurt in the accident.

Traffic stopped north and south of the accident for at least 15 minutes as the accident was investigated by Kentucky State Police.

Anderson county fire, sheriff's office and Kentucky State Police responded.

85-year-old could walk on DUI charge

Prosecutor appeals judge's decision to suppress reason man was pulled over by police

By Ben Carlson
News staff

The Anderson County Attorney's office is appealing a district court judge's decision that could result in an 85-year-old man not being convicted on a DUI charge.

Judge Donna Dutton ruled in February that a Lawrenceburg police officer should not have pulled the man over and granted a defense motion to suppress any further findings, including that the man was allegedly intoxicated at the time of his arrest.

Assistant County Attorney Tiffany Gash Azzinaro has since filed a writ, which sends the matter to

City moves forward with splash park

Giles votes against grant, says vandalism is concern

By Meaghan Downs

Children may be splashing around in a new "splash park" as early as next summer if the city receives a matching $75,000 grant to move forward with the project.

The city council voted 4-1 to adopt a resolution for the mayor to apply for a Land and Water Conservation Grant to be used for the construction of an estimated $150,000 to $160,000 "wet play area" in the city park.

Council member Ken Evans was absent from the council's Monday night meeting.

Above is an illustration of what a splash park would look like. It would be built next year if the city gets a $75,000 matching grant to fund the project.

Mayor Edwinna Baker and City Clerk Robbie Hume said the city would need to budget matching funds of about $75,000 or 50 percent of the project's total cost for next year if awarded the federal grant. According to Hume, this is the third Land and Water Conservation grant project the city has undertaken. The splash park, at a proposed 3,000 square feet, features aquatic sprayers and spouts in the shape of marine life, animals and sports equipment.

The park's water supply would come from a city water hook up, and shut off automatically at night, Hume said. The splash park would operate on a timer with users pushing an activator to start the water features.

"Sounds good to me; it's good news," city council member Bobby Durr said. "We've been working on a swimming pool and that for years."

City council member Larry Giles, who voted against the resolution, said he wasn't against the idea of a splash park, but was concerned about the city's ability to keep the water feature from being vandalized.

"You can't keep the gazebo out there [from being vandalized], that's my concern," Giles said. "We need to talk about it to some extent."

Hume said the city would know by fall 2013 if it received the matching federal funds for the splash park, with construction to begin in the spring of 2014.

Any construction on the splash park would need to be bid to vendors, Baker and Hume said.

Crouch said he saw Lyens drive past him on US 127 Bypass near Walmart and noticed he was not wearing a seat belt. When he got behind him, Crouch said Lyens' license plate was partially obscured, so he attempted to pull him over.

"He just burned down 44 and took off," Crouch said.

Lyens reached speeds of 90 mph on Highway 44, a narrow state highway with sharp curves, and speeds of 70 mph while going through Glensboro, where the speed limit is 35 mph, according to police reports.

Lyens also allegedly swerved his vehicle into oncoming traffic twice, along with swerving his vehicle at Woodside, who eventually deployed traffic spikes to disable Lyens' vehicle.

Crouch said the spikes were destroyed during the incident along with two police uniforms, one pair of police shoes, a camera and a Taser cartridge.

He said Lyens had a needle loaded with methamphetamine at the time of his arrest, along with two other drug needles and a bent spoon.

Two females in Lyens' vehicle were charged with public intoxication, according to reports.

forced to return its tax rate to the original 25 cents from its current rate of 86 cents, a 71 percent decrease that would take the revenue it collects from the local tax base from about $1.3 million a year to just under $400,000.

"It would drastically slash our income," Mullins said. "By necessity, we would have to drastically slash our services."

The Anderson library's attorney, Benjamin Crittenden, declined to comment on the ruling and referred questions to Mullins.

Wayne Onkst, commissioner of the Kentucky Department of Libraries and Archives, declined to comment on the recent ruling, saying he is "going to pass on questions regarding the lawsuit."

The lawsuit, which was filed last year by a group of concerned taxpayers, contends that libraries formed by petition are supposed to set local tax rates based on Kentucky Revised Statute 179.790, not House Bill 44, which was passed in 1979 and is used by other taxing districts to figure annual tax rates.

The Campbell library argued that HB 44 is the proper method, but the judge flatly rejected that notion.

"Pursuant to KRS 173.790, a library tax created by a petition of the people of a county can only be changed by a petition of the people of that county," Ward wrote in her ruling. "There is a certain logic to this procedure and there is no manifest indication that the Kentucky State Legislature intended that House Bill 44 take this power away from the people."

Unlike HB 44, which gives taxing districts the ability to increase revenue as much as 4 percent without being subjected to a public vote, KRS 173.790 mandates that libraries such as Anderson's need a petition containing signatures of at least 51 percent of the number of people who voted in the last general election to agree to raising or lowering the rate.

That petition would then be sent to the fiscal court for approval.

However, KRS 179.790 does not allow a tax rate to be lowered if contractual obligations or debt would be adversely affected by the decrease.

It is unclear as a result of the ruling if the Anderson library will forge ahead with expansion plans announced last month. Still in the discussion stage, those plans range from spending between $1 million and $4 million to accommodate children's programming and other claimed needs.

The local library, which posted a $400,000 net profit last year according to a recent audit, has about $2 million in excess revenue. It is also unclear if expansion would be done by incurring debt or paid for with available cash.

Onkst, the state commissioner, confirmed that KDLA has advised libraries to use HB 44 to set tax rates since it was passed into law.

Mullins, the local director, said she has heard of attorneys' general opinions in favor of libraries using HB 44, and that the library annually receives documents from the Department of Local Government providing tax rate formulas based on HB 44.

Ward, the judge in the lawsuit, said the state legislature was clear about how libraries are to set tax rates when it modified existing legislation in 1984.

"The only amendment to KRS 179.790 was the additional of the phrase before July 13, 1984," she wrote. "Surely the legislature would have not added language to a statute they already intended to have been repealed," she added, noting that HB 44 was passed five years earlier.

The judge's ruling on tax rates was only part of the lawsuit in northern Kentucky.

The suit also demands that taxpayers be refunded the money collected improperly by libraries. Another hearing in the case is scheduled for April 25 in Campbell County Circuit Court.

A similar suit is pending in Kenton County, but the judge there has yet to issue a ruling.

Circuit Court Judge Charles Hickman who can agree with Dutton or overturn her order. It is unclear Tuesday when that would happen.

Sterling McDaniel, 85, of 1050 Macland Drive, was stopped last March by officer Josh Satterly as he turned from Glensboro Road onto US 127 Bypass, according to court documents.

Satterly stopped McDaniel after a caller told 911 dispatch that he had been drinking whiskey at his residence earlier that day.

In his report, Satterly said that McDaniel was driving very slowly, had eight to 10 cars behind him and made a wide left turn onto US 127 before pulling over in an emergency lane.

Satterly said McDaniel "was very confused" when he approached his car and smelled of alcohol. According to court documents, McDaniel had a blood alcohol content of 0.93, well over the legal limit of 0.80.

"He was very unsteady on his feet and had to be helped into the police station," Satterly said in his report.

In a document filed by Azzinaro, she wrote that McDaniel told Satterly that "he was on his way to [a liquor store] to get another bottle of alcohol" at the time of his arrest.

McDaniel has a previous DUI conviction from 2007 in Franklin County and had his license reinstated after completing an alcohol treatment program, according to documents on file in Anderson District Court.

Azzinaro argues that the stop was legal and that Satterly had reasonable criminal suspicion to pull him over based on the 911 call and the improper left turn McDaniel made.

In her order, Dutton concluded that the left turn wasn't necessarily illegal and that the case hinges on whether the person who called 911 is an "anonymous tipster" or "citizen informant."

"The court believes this is clearly an anonymous tip case," Dutton wrote, adding that Satterly did not know the 911 caller's name at the time of the traffic stop. "Since this was an anonymous tip, then in order for the officer to pull the defendant over he must have subsequent observations in order to constitute a reasonable articulable suspicion necessary to conduct an investigative traffic stop."

Regardless of the outcome of the circuit court judge's ruling on Azzinaro's writ, the case is scheduled to go to trial in September.

Legal sources said Dutton's order to suppress does not mean charges against McDaniel are dismissed, only that the evidence can't be used against him during a trial, making a conviction nearly impossible.

Middle school student earns honorable mention during UK entomology symposium

From staff reports

An Anderson County Middle School student received an honorable mention for his presentation during a University of Kentucky symposium on invasive species.

Tanner Carlson, 12, a seventh grader, competed in a poster contest against undergraduate college students during the event, held last week in Lexington.

Carlson's presentation was on the emerald ash borer, which has invaded a number of counties in Kentucky, including Anderson, and kills ash trees.

Carlson focused on public education as a means of stopping the bug from spreading into other areas, including educational presentations to students and local government officials.

An aspiring entomologist, Carlson attended the two day conference during which he answered questions from those viewing his poster and the website he created.

He received a certificate during the awards presentation.

"We're so happy that Tanner attended the conference, and thrilled that he took the time and effort to make a professional contribution to the program content," said Lynne K. Rieske-Kinney, a professor of forest entomology in the University of Kentucky Department of Entomology.

"The points he raised were thoughtful and contributed to further discussion. We're very much interested in his work, and hope that his experience was positive enough to maintain his momentum as a developing scientist.

"As Tanner's interests in entomology and invasion biology develop I hope he keeps UK in mind. There are many, many opportunities for someone with his interests and his motivation to contribute to ongoing research."

'Armed and dangerous' Anderson County man mistakenly turned loose

Landmark News Service

A manhunt was under way Tuesday afternoon for an Anderson County man who considered by federal marshals to be armed and dangerous but mistakenly let out the Fayette County Detention Center.

Rodney Dewayne Bell, 28, had been jailed for a short time at the Shelby County Detention Center, after being arrested in Anderson County on drugs charges, said Tony Aldridge, a captain at the Shelby County Detention Center.

Aldridge said that Bell had also incurred federal charges by the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms (ATF).

Bell was transferred Friday to Fayette County because he had incurred a warrant for contempt of court for not paying a fine.

According to a press release from the Fayette County Detention Center, the bond for the Fayette County warrant was $1,000, and Bell paid it and was released.

On Monday, Fayette jail officials discovered Bell had also been under a federal holder and that marshals considered him to be armed and dangerous, the release said.

The marshals have been notified and a warrant has been issued for Bell's arrest.

Fayette jail officials said that Bell was released in error due to a miscommunication in the transfer documents.

Marshals had not returned phone calls inquiring into the nature of Bell's federal charges.

Bell is described as a black male with black hair and brown eyes, weighing 205 pounds and 5 feet, 10 inches tall. His date of birth is Sept. 9, 1984.

Anyone with any knowledge of Bell's whereabouts should contact Lexington Police at 859-259-3600 or the Fayette County Sheriff's Office at 252-1771.

Lawsuit blessing in disguise for library

The Anderson Public library's board of trustees will apparently wait until a court orders it to comply with the statute that governs how it's supposed to set tax rates before doing so on its own.

And that's a shame because by doing so the board is missing out on a great chance to reinvent its image and survive what will otherwise be a devastating financial blow.

The order to lower its tax rate has already come for a library in northern Kentucky and, trust me on this, a similar order will eventually be issued here.

A circuit court judge in Campbell County told the library there to return to the tax rate it had in 1979 in a summary judgment favoring a group of taxpayers who sued the library.

When, not if, that happens here, our library will have to return to the rate set by the fiscal court in 1967 of 25 cents per $1,000 assessed value, trimming its local revenue from $1.3 million to just short of $400,000.

Those hoping to have the circuit court judge's decision overturned by the Court of Appeals should be careful what they wish for. The circuit judge's ruling was a summary judgment, a nice way of telling that library's attorneys that they have no facts to support their arguments in court.

And when that decision is upheld on appeal it will then cover the entire state and force our library back to its original 1967 rate.

Yes that would be devastating to how the library currently operates, but that doesn't mean the operation can't be salvaged if the trustees play their cards right and take the following steps on their own.

Instead of digging in their heels, trustees would first be wise to acknowledge decades of mistakes and return to the 1967 rate. The public would appreciate such a gesture and be much more likely to support efforts to re-establish a functional tax rate.

Unlike other libraries, ours can afford such a large rate reduction in the short term because it has at least two years worth of operating capital — about $2 million in cash — on hand.

Second, the statute that actually governs library tax rates gives it the ability to set a rate closer to its current level.

Doing so would require a petition with signatures of at least 51 percent of the number of people who voted in the previous election. A daunting task, yes, but one that could be accomplished if the library board asked for a reasonable rate.

That rate, by the way, is not the current 86 cents per $1,000 assessed value. By its own audit that rate netted the library a $400,000 profit last year and is an inexcusable gouging of the taxpayers.

A rate of 60 cents would wipe out that profit, but provide the library the revenue it needs to operate as-is for the foreseeable future and give the public a sense that it is no longer being gouged.

Let's face it. While the vast majority of Anderson Countians will never darken the doorstep of the local library, most aren't interested in seeing it destroyed, either.

They will, if properly asked, support a reasonable tax rate to keep a library functioning, but only if those who run the library are willing to demonstrate that the days of running roughshod over them with confiscatory taxes have ended, and take responsibility for past transgressions.

Oh, and given this pending change, it would be wise also to halt any plans to expand.

If it takes those steps, the library has a chance to engage the public with its mission for the future, rebuild public trust and remain a vital and growing public institution.

Or it could continue digging in its heels, alienating the public and, when forced to ask for signatures on a petition, be told thanks but no thanks.

Bandit leaps toward Little Gray's outstretched claws this past summer as they play in our driveway.

A band of cats invaded our garage, capturing my dogged devotion

If you had asked just more than a year ago, I'd have sworn to you I was a dyed-in-the-fur dog person.

I proclaimed my love for all animals — dolphins, dogs, elephants, frogs — but when it came to cats, I was uninterested. Never had a cat. Didn't understand them — or their people, really. Required a preventative dose of Benadryl to stave off my sneezes when visiting their homes.

But a funny thing happened when I got to know a few felines who were hanging around our neighborhood.

Bandit and his friends let themselves be lured slowly into our garage last spring. Day by day, they followed the tuna trail my husband laid. Until finally, they were eating inside — as long as we didn't get too close, or move too fast, or make it too obvious we were actually looking at them.

We marked milestones throughout the summer. We could pet them when they were eating. And then even when they weren't. Shy guy Grayson rolled over at our feet one warm afternoon, suddenly unafraid to request a tummy rub. Sherbert marched proudly and kneaded his paws on my leg when I sat down next to him and set him in my lap.

And, oh, the photos! When one of us was away and the other was hanging out with the kitties, the pictures flew between our phones. Bandit, Herbert and Sherbert snuggling on the couch, grooming one another. Playmates Grayson and Little Gray eyeing each other warily, tails twitching. Scruffy in the lawnmower seat, all green eyes and dark fluff. A rare and celebrated visit from Tahoe, the wanderer.

At last, I understood what fueled the Internet's never-ending parade of cat pictures!

When winter's fingers began to wrap themselves around fall, our independent kitties decided they didn't mind being locked in the heated garage all night. We set them up with a litter box, a few beds

Bibb lettuce has strong Kentucky roots

Kentuckians may know that Bibb lettuce was developed by Major John Bibb in the backyard of his Frankfort home — Grey Gables (Bibb-Burnley House).

He moved to Frankfort in 1856 and shared his seeds and plants with friends. Soon it became known as Bibb lettuce and became commercially produced in 1935.

Soon you will be able to buy Bibb lettuce at the local farmer's markets. The Anderson County Farmer's Market opens Friday, April 26 at noon.

Regular hours are Friday from noon to 6 p.m., Saturday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Sundays from noon to 3 p.m. The Frankfort Farmer's Market opens Saturday, April 13 at River View Park.

Please support our local farmers.

Delicious salad greens have come a long way since they were originally thought to be weeds. Varieties of salad greens have been documented in Egyptian tomb paintings and identified by various Greek scholars.

Christopher Columbus introduced lettuce to the new world.

Popular spring leaf lettuce varieties include arugula, characterized by small, flat leaves with long stems, similar to dandelion leaves, with a peppery taste; loose leaf with curly leaves joined at the stem, including oak leaf, red leaf and green leaf; chicory or curly endive with dark, outer leaves and paler (or yellow) leaves toward the center and a ragged edge on long thin stems with a slightly bitter taste; and escarole, a milder chicory family member with broad wavy leaves. Romaine lettuce has a loaf-like shape with darker outer leaves, a strong taste and crispy texture, similar to iceberg lettuce.

Select fresh, crisp lettuce leaves with no signs of wilting, slime or dark spots on edges. Check greens brought in bunches for insects.

Avoid storing greens near fruits that produce ethylene gases (like apples) as this will increase brown spots on leaves and cause spoilage.

Fresh spinach is one of the most popular raw salad greens. Its dark green color indicates a highly nutritious, low calorie source of vitamins A and C. One cup raw spinach has about 10 calories and approximately 60 percent of the recommended daily allowance for vitamin A.

Stored in the refrigerator crisper drawer, it should last 3 to 4 days. Lettuce is an important cool-season vegetable crop that tolerates light frost, but intense sunlight and high summer temperatures can cause seed stalk formation and bitter flavors. Lettuce does well in hotbeds during the winter months and in cold frames in the spring and late fall. For more information on growing lettuce, see Home Vegetable Gardening in Kentucky, ID128, 2011.

I've found the enemy, it's us

Bending paperclips calms me.

Fragile metal contorted into shepherd's hooks or misshapen cranes twisted inert beneath computer paper shrouds.

Their broken limbs of snapped, twisted metal litter my desk.

They are the leftovers of trying to wield control in an uncontrollable world.

Destroying something that can't ever be made whole again relieves stress.

It always has.

When I was a child, usually sitting in the left outfield wearing my baseball mitt as a hat, my fingers happily found grass to destroy.

The grass was perfect for tearing and ripping until each blade could be scattered to the spring wind.

In the years since, water bottle wrappers met their untimely end, shredded to confetti.

Dying dandelions plucked clean of their fluffy, white seeds.

Now paperclips are the new victims in my hands, twisting and turning so they can snap before I do.

Maybe that's why we go to shooting ranges and boxing rings: to destroy inanimate objects before we resort to inflicting pain on others.

I recently had the misfortune of watching the short trailer for the upcoming horror flick "The Purge," scheduled for a national release in May.

And as with every other horror movie I've ever seen (I have a photographic memory only for the things that will terrify me for nightmares to come), I cannot erase the premise out of my head.

The plot follows the dark, dystopian trend of popular television, movies and literature in recent memory: a future America boasts a shockingly low unemployment rate.

Crime is nonexistent.

That's thanks to "The Purge," one night a year in which all crime is legal, a night in which Americans can shoot, beat and murder to release the pent-up violence inside them.

Hospitals will be closed. The police will not respond to calls for help.

The violence in the movie, undoubtedly, will be frightening and disturbing.

Far-fetched? Probably. This movie is coming to you from The Art House That Made the Transformers Movies.

But the film will be scary, I'd argue, not due to the violence, but because "The Purge"

Four Roses' new limited edition features 13-year-old barrel strength bourbon

Kentucky spirit to hit store shelves in mid-April

From staff reports
This spring, Four Roses Distillery will issue the newest release in its series of limited-quantity special bottlings with the 2013 Limited Edition Single Barrel Bourbon, which will be bottled at barrel strength and feature spicy characteristics of cinnamon, nutmeg and brown sugar, according to a press release.

Four Roses Master Distiller Jim Rutledge personally selected a 13-year-old bourbon that uses Four Roses' recipe coded OBSK, one of 10 uniquely hand-crafted bourbon recipes produced by the Lawrenceburg-based distillery.

The new bourbon exhibits an aroma of orange peel and fresh gingerbread, with flavor characteristics of fresh honey, brown sugar and cinnamon along with light mint and wild berries.

The palate offers flavors of dark chocolate truffle and spiced cookies encompassing a soft, smooth and mellow finish, the release states.

"Occasionally we come across some really special barrels and that is what we have found with this Limited Edition Single Barrel," said Rutledge in the release.

"Upon tasting this bourbon straight from the barrel, I immediately checked the available barrels in hopes we had a sufficient quantity to share this special bourbon with our customers. Even at barrel strength, it's easy to drink on the rocks or neat."

Four Roses' 10 distinct recipes allow the distillery to continually offer a variety of unique, limited-edition single barrel bottlings.

A barrel strength bottling offers bourbon enthusiasts the opportunity to taste straight from the barrel, when the bourbon is uncut and non-chill filtered.

At a proof range between 100.6 and 114.4, approximately 4,000 bottles of the Four Roses 2013 Limited Edition Single Barrel Bourbon are planned for distribution in mid-April to U.S. markets where the brand is currently available.

In November, for the third consecutive year and fourth time in six years, Four Roses Distillery was named 2013 "Whisky Distiller of the Year - America" by worldwide whisky industry publication, Whisky Magazine, during the annual Icons of Whisky Awards.

This year marks 125 years of perseverance for Four Roses, which is highlighted at www.yearofthetoast.com, a website celebrating the milestone anniversary and allowing visitors to view a number of toasts for any occasion, read toasting tips and submit a toast.

One toast will be selected to be featured on next year's Limited Edition Single Barrel offering, along with the name and hometown of the person who submitted it.

Woman offers $1,000 reward for missing wedding ring

Winfrey 'at her wit's end' in search for 60-year-old jewelry

By Meaghan Downs
News staff

She's taken the seats out of her car and torn apart her 8-month-old granddaughter's diaper bag. But Lisa Ann Winfrey of Lawrenceburg hasn't given up on finding her priceless wedding band. Not yet, anyway. The missing ring is actually more like a bracelet, she said; she's soldered together her wedding band, engagement ring, 10th anniversary wedding band and separate gold "enhancer" that wraps around the solitaire diamond into one piece. "It's just almost constricting to wear it," Winfrey, who usually only wears the ring on special occasions, said. While getting ready to attend the Anderson Middle School dance banquet March 25 (Winfrey is the middle school dance coach), she went to her jewelry box to retrieve the ring. The ring wasn't there, and Winfrey has been looking for it ever since. She's been tracing the timeline of the last day she remembers wearing the ring, March 17.

Reward for missing wedding ring

Lisa Ann Winfrey is offering $1,000 for the return of her engagement/wedding ring. The ring is described as having four gold bands, one solitaire and one wrap (together.) Contact Jon Winfrey at 502-604-3967 if anyone has information on the ring's whereabouts.

"I put lotion on my hands, and I know the ring was there, and I haven't seen it since," Winfrey said. "And yes, it's valuable, but it's the sentimental value that's driving me." Typed up on a sheet of computer paper with a rough sketch of the ring drawn by her daughter, Winfrey's reward posters — which Winfrey has posted at nearly every place she went on March 17 — offer $1,000 for anyone who finds the ring. Winfrey even said she doesn't care if the caller melted the ring and sold the gold; she wants to know it's gone so she can stop looking. She wouldn't press charges, Winfrey said; it was her fault she lost it. The ring is that valuable to her sentimentally, at least. "It came down a generation, and I hoped it'd go down two more generations or three more generations," she said. In 1982, Winfrey had turned 22. Her husband just graduated from Murray State University and started a new job at Kentucky Utilities. The couple didn't have money to buy new furniture, let alone wedding rings. Winfrey even got married in her mother's wedding dress. So Winfrey's mother-in-law and father-in-law gave their own rings for Winfrey and her husband to exchange during their vows. "Of course when we got married, we had nothing, so we used their rings to get married in," Winfrey said. "That was so special." Winfrey said she hasn't told her mother-in-law yet that the 60-year-old ring is missing; she said she thinks Fay Winfrey would understand. Winfrey said she's not neglectful with receipts or paperwork, but she did just find gloves she thought she'd lost forever, and a gift certificate in the bottom of a laundry bag. "I'm not there yet," Winfrey said of resigning to the fact that the ring is lost for good. "I keep hoping that I'll reach into a pocket and it'll mysteriously be there." Winfrey has inherited other family heirlooms to pass down to her son, daughter and granddaughter — her great great-grandmother's 1918 engagement ring, her mother's ring and her grandmother's ring. Winfrey was hoping her mother-in-law's wedding band could be counted among them, as a testament to her husband's side of the family and what her mother-in-law did for her. A story she can pass down to her granddaughter Danilee Kallin, hopefully with the ring. "The fact that [mother-in-law Fay Winfrey] was willing to give up her own ring so that I would have a ring to get married in is a pretty special mother-in-law," Winfrey said. Fiscal court pelts Carey with questions over pulling events

County attorney says way events scheduled 'disturbing'

By Ben Carlson
News staff

Controversy over use of the pulling track at the county park continued last week, including stiff questions from the county attorney over events being scheduled without the fiscal court's approval.

The topic surfaced during last Tuesday night's meeting of the Anderson County Fiscal Court as magistrates considered a request to abandon its current lease system for the track in favor of simply renting it out.

David Carey, whose father, Eddie, has used the pulling track twice a year for the past several years to host major truck and tractor pull events, suggested that instead of having to verify income and expenses and donating profits to the county, magistrates could instead charge a flat weekend fee for its use.

"That would get rid of all the speculation about the money," David Carey said, referring to criticism and unfounded rumors that his father pockets money from the events.

Magistrate David Ruggles jumped on those comments and reminded Carey that the park is public property and that there are rules in place that govern how it is to be used.

"That's a whole different standard," Ruggles said. "You need to collect the money in a certain way, you need to bring us receipts and show us what the cash is and it will end all of this speculation.

"I don't think that's ever been done, and I thought that's what you were going to do. If you do this in the future, that's what you need to do ... and it will take all of this black cloud away."

Carey said the next truck and tractor pull is scheduled for Derby weekend, which touched off even more questions from County Attorney Bobbi Jo Lewis.

"What I find disturbing is the way this is done," Lewis said, directing her comments at the fiscal court. "Who approved this pull in May?"

"This is public property and it needs to be observed as such. You have a lease for that property, and it needs to be abided by."

Following a firestorm of questions sparked by pulls several years ago, the fiscal court developed a lease that requires those sponsoring pulls to have proper insurance and turn over documentation of expenses and receipts to the fiscal court within 30 days after the event.

Net proceeds are supposed to be turned over the fiscal court.

It is unclear if Carey has strictly adhered to those rules, but he has said repeatedly that the money he has raised has been used to improve the pulling track, including fencing that he and his workers installed a couple of years ago.

Judge-Executive John Wayne Conway confirmed that the rules haven't been followed, saying that a truck tug group that frequently used the track for charitable events and a lawn-mower pulling group have "only been in once or twice," to provide revenue and receipt figures.

"Eddie's been in once or twice, too," Conway said.

David Carey argued that there are numerous

Conservation district requests more money

Roy Toney of the Anderson County Conservation District asked the fiscal court to increase its contribution from $25,000 to $35,000 a year to make up for other losses.

His request came during last Tuesday night's fiscal court meeting, but was tabled until he provides additional budget information for magistrates. Toney said two other agencies have moved out of the district's office in the past several years, forcing it to pay rent on its own.

Backhoe purchased

The fiscal court voted unanimously to purchase a John Deere backhoe, the least expensive option of several bids it received.

"If the road foreman wants a John Deere, we ought to go with a John Deere," said Magistrate David Ruggles.

Judge-Executive John Wayne Conway said the county will "write a check" and not finance the backhoe, and won't trade it its old backhoe.

"We won't get what it's worth to us," said Conway, noting that it can be used for roadwork, recycling and in the county park.

expenses that are hard to define when putting on large events, including hauling in equipment from other areas, fuel costs and other services that aren't necessarily billed out.

"This goes to the county park and benefits the whole community," he said. "There are things you can't put a number on. Eddie loses a lot of money on this."

Following a break in the meeting, Conway said he had spoken with David Carey and that he had agreed to provide all requested documentation following the pull in May, followed by a unanimous vote of the court to allow the pull for May 3-4, followed by ATV races May 5.

City council to hold public hearing on proposed historic district

By Meaghan Downs
News staff

The creation of a Lawrenceburg historic district will have to wait until the city council hears from the people.

The council voted 4-1 to table its final recommendation and to schedule a public hearing allowing property owners to express concerns or support for the establishment of a historic district.

City council member Ken Evans was absent from the April 8 meeting.

Council member Bobby Durr made the first motion, saying he'd like to hold a public hearing before the council moves forward on anything involving the district.

"There's too many unanswered questions, that's the main thing," Durr said after the meeting. "I don't want to push something on the people until they know what it's going to be."

City council member George Geoghegan was the sole dissenting vote for the public hearing, saying another hearing would already need to be held regarding historic district standards — the main concern of many property owners attending the first and only public hearing on the historic district in December 2011.

"That wouldn't be necessary because it goes back to the historic district commission to adopt paint colors and things like that," Geoghegan, who was chairman of the historic district commission at the time of the 2011 public hearing, said. "It goes to another public hearing."

Council member Thomas Vaughn added that during that meeting, an "overwhelming number of people did not want the district."

"But that was because of paint colors and other things," Geoghegan replied. "And at that time, there would be another public hearing if the commission decides that."

Geoghegan also contested the Planning and Zoning commission's tardiness in applying for an extension from the city council to review a historic district recommendation. Geoghegan said the board had exceeded the 60-day and 90-day time periods provided in the two statutes cited in the board's recommendation to the council.

"Our ordinance says 60 days, but we've exceeded the 90 days," Geoghegan said. "The statute may even supersede. I mean, it is arguable."

City attorney Robert Myles said since the council granted the planning and zoning board the extension the board requested, the council has 60 days from April 8 to hold a public hearing and take action on the board's recommendation.

"It is my feeling that the statute, having now been presented, you have the 60 days forward to action on their request for their recommendation," Myles said.

"I think at this point on, while it very well may be arguable, there are a thousand things done everyday, if you want to litigate it, it is certainly possible ... you have 60 days from today's date to take whatever action you deem appropriate."

As of Monday night's meeting, the city council has 60 days to either recommend the creation of a historic district or to vote down the establishment of a district.

If the council were to take no action on planning and zoning's recommendation, the historic district would be automatically established.

Durr's motion stipulated that a public hearing would be held prior to the council's May 13 meeting, but no date had been scheduled as of press time.

The Rev. Robert Ehr, representing First Baptist Church located on Main Street across from city hall, commended the city council for taking the time to hold a public hearing.

Ehr said he was attending Monday night's meeting for the express purpose of hearing the current status of the historic district.

"We have concerns if this historical district was passed, what restrictions that would place on churches like ours as we seek to grow and expand," Ehr said.

According to the historic district designation report provided to the city council, about 172 properties are currently included in the current district boundaries.

If a historic district were established, every property owner in charge of a designated historic property would need to keep all exterior portions of the property in good repair, according to the city ordinance on the historic district.

Property owners with land, homes or businesses in the historic district are to apply for a certificate from the commission before undertaking new work on a historic property.

The historic district ordinance also states "any person violating any of the provisions of this chapter shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be fined not less than $50, nor more than $500 for each offense. Each day's violation shall constitute a separate offense."

No specific violations are listed in the 2006 historic district ordinance.

Other business

Spring hydrant flushing will begin April 22, and spring clean up for the city will begin April 29.

Since the water tank near Wild Turkey has been filled, Public Works Director Larry Hazlett said the water tanks on Center Street may be taken down in May.

No foul play found in Lynn Drive woman's death

By Ben Carlson
News staff

Foul play has been ruled out in the death of a woman found dead in her Lynn Drive apartment Sunday afternoon. The body of Melissa Brown, 42, was found by her landlord around 1:30 p.m., according to Anderson County Coroner Mark Tussey.

Tussey conducted an autopsy Monday morning on Brown, and determined that earlier suspicions of foul play were not founded.

“We conducted a very thorough investigation and, based on preliminary findings at the scene and after inter-viewing parties with information regarding her health and preliminary autopsy results, I don’t suspect any foul play,” Tussey said.

Tussey said his earlier suspicions were based on witnesses who said Brown and her boyfriend argued the night before her death in her front yard, and that there was a history of domestic violence.

He said toxicology results of the autopsy won’t be available for three to six weeks.

A visitation for Brown has been scheduled for Thursday, April 11 from 5-7 p.m. at Gash Memorial Chapel.

She is survived by three sons, Marcus (Ashley) Brown, and Derek Logan Cooper, Lawrenceburg, and Cody James Cooper, Frankfort; a granddaughter, Brooklyn Jean Brown; a brother, James (Angie) Brown of Lawrenceburg; and two sisters, Deborah Newby and Elizabeth (David) Lloyd, both of Lawrenceburg.

Memorial contributions can be made to the Melissa Jayne Brown Fund, c/o Gash Memorial Chapel, 332 South Main Street, Lawrenceburg, KY 40342.

Suspects in Anderson child tying case back in court Friday

From staff reports

The attorneys for three people charged last year with tying up a 3-year-old girl for up to 16 hours a day will argue Friday in court to have their clients’ upcoming trial moved out of Anderson County.

“There’s been a lot of publicity,” public defender Scott Getsinger said during a hearing earlier this year in Anderson Circuit Court when he introduced his motion for a change of venue. “I’m not sure the people of this county can [fairly] hear this case.”

Getsinger is representing the 3-year-old’s mother, Rebecca Medley. The girl’s stepfather, Herbert Medley, and grandmother, Carolyn Case, each have separate public defenders in the case.

All three are charged with first-degree criminal child abuse in the incident, which came to light late last summer.

They were scheduled to go to trial last month, but the venue change request has pushed that into May.

All three previously pleaded not guilty to the charge, which was brought against them last September following an investigation by the Kentucky State Police and social services.

The charge stems from a state police investigation during which Case reportedly told troopers that the 3-year-old was tied to her bed from 8 p.m. to 6 a.m. each day.

She also acknowledged that the child was also tied to the bed for a two-hour nap, and spent an additional four hours tied up for discipline, according to the documents. She was also tied up to a booster seat in a kitchen chair for up to an hour a day for discipline.

The child was tied up with a curtain sash by lacing it through the arm holes in her shirt and behind her back. It was then fastened to the bed using a large horse collar safety pin, according to court documents. The sash was also used to tie her to a kitchen chair.

Case, the grandmother, told investigating troopers with the Kentucky State Police that the girl “spent more time tied up than free,” according to documents.

Case also told investigators that she was tied up because she was “getting out of bed and getting into things,” and that she was trying to “get out of the residence when everyone was asleep.”

Case added that the girl’s mother, Rebecca Medley, “would tie [the girl] up very tightly and that [her] movement was very impaired and she was not able to escape.”

The girl was being tied up from June 1 through Aug. 3, when a child protective services worker alerted the state police.

Herbert Medley told police he knew about the girl being tied up but “felt he could not tell anyone because Case had threatened to kick them out of the residence.”

He said that Case started the practice and showed his wife how to do it.

When Christ calls, be prepared for more change

“Passing alongside the Sea of Galilee, he saw Simon and Andrew the brother of Simon casting a net into the sea, for they were fishermen. And Jesus said to them, “Follow me, and I will make you become fishers of men.” And immediately they left their nets and followed him.

Brian Owens
Faith columnist

And going on a little farther, he saw James the son of Zebedee and John his brother, who were in their boat mending the nets. And immediately he called them, and they left their father Zebedee in the boat with the hired servants and followed him.” (Mark 1:16-20, ESV)

God calls whom he will. In this case he called fishermen - dirty, smelly, common fishermen. He could have called the learned men of Israel - the scholars, the teachers, the politicians - yet he chose to call common men. This reminds me of what Paul wrote in 1 Corinthians 1:26, namely that God did not choose the wise, the mighty or the noble; he calls what is looked at by the world as downright foolish. The irony here is that even the apparent “foolishness” of God is wiser than the wisest of men!

Still, it’s not so much who Jesus called as what he called them to do. When Christ calls us he changes us. He does use our personality, giftedness and life experiences; those all come to bear on our calling. We cannot, however, stay the same and follow Jesus. Our very existence is tied up in our identification with Jesus Christ. “Whoever abides in me and I in him, he it is that bears much fruit, for apart from me you can do nothing” (John 15:5, ESV).

Christ changed their purpose in life. “I will make you fishers of men.” Their focus changed from meeting their daily needs to being on mission with God. They went from seeking and saving earthly wealth to seeking and saving the lost (Luke 19:10).

When Christ calls us, he also claims us. “They left everything and followed him.” Here’s the rub: Many people are content to follow Jesus as long as they could keep one foot at home. Many are not willing to give up everything for Christ. They want to hold onto something that they feel was indispensable to them, whether that was a possession, a place or a person.

You may ask, “Does Jesus want me to give away my stuff to make more room for him? Does he want me to change my career objectives so I can serve him? Should I quit my job and enter the ministry?” The questions seem endless.

I cannot tell you how this applies to you specifically. However, your decision should come after careful prayer and meditation on God’s Word, counsel with godly friends and the leadership of your local church. While God’s call may look different for each individual, it will have the same thrust - God calls, claims and changes his people. And he does this for our good and his glory.

IMPUTED SINS FORGIVEN

Romans 4:8 “Blessed is the man to whom the Lord shall not impute sin” (Romans 4:8). Whose sins are not imputed? It is the man whom God has forgiven after he has confessed his sins. Actually verse 7 and 8 of Romans 4 must be considered together. They form a quote from Psalm 32:1-2 and along with verse 5 it becomes clear that the sin that is not imputed is confessed sin. David shares with us four things that are found in vs. 5: 1. “I acknowledge my sin to You.” 2. “My iniquity I have not hidden.” 3. “I said, ‘I will confess my transgression to the Lord.’” 4. “And you forgave the iniquity of my sin.” From where Paul was quoting, David said, “I will confess my transgressions.” After he confessed his sins and God forgiving him, there was nothing to impute, they were forgiven.

On the day of Pentecost, after the resurrection of Jesus, Peter and the rest of the apostles taught the Deity of Christ, and the people were pricked in their hearts and asked what to do to be saved. They were in sin! They were told to “Repent, and let everyone of you be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins; and you shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit” (Acts 2:38). They had to REPENT of their sins, and BE BAPTIZED, Christ’s righteousness did not hide their sins, it was through His sacrifice that sins could be forgiven. Salvation came because of their obedience to the faith (Acts 2:47).

Come for the bourbon, stay for Lawrenceburg

Tourism Commission focuses on Bourbon Trail sponsorship to lure tourists

By Meaghan Downs
News staff

Kim Marks of Louisville is a Kentucky Bourbon Trail veteran.

He estimated he's completed the entire trail — currently at seven bourbon distilleries — about 25 times.

He's been to Wild Turkey Distillery about four times this year alone, he said.

"I love bourbon," Kim said, standing in the Wild Turkey parking lot last Saturday with his basset hound, Beauregard Duke Barks, in tow. "[Distilleries] teach me new things."

On Saturday Marks and Laura Epperson of Washington state were visiting Wild Turkey to take the dog's photo by the Wild Turkey statue outside the distillery's visitor center, and to purchase the distillery's gourmet bourbon sauce.

But they'd be back to Lawrenceburg for distillery tours as soon as maybe the following weekend, Marks said.

Anderson County Tourism Commission chairman Magen Hoskins said the focus for tourism should be on Bourbon Trail participants, getting those tourists to go off the bourbon-beaten path to other Lawrenceburg attractions like wineries or restaurants.

"That is our main focus, yes," Hoskins said of the Bourbon Trail, "of course, we promote and support all of our attractions. We feel [bourbon is] what's really bringing people in."

The tourism commission recently paid $5,000 for the year to become one of the official sponsors of the Kentucky

Bourbon Trail, Hoskins said.

As an "official sponsor," the Anderson County Tourism Commission would receive rotating ad space on the Bourbon Trail website to highlight the county and the distilleries; the Kentucky Bourbon Trail would mention Anderson County on promotional materials, on its iPhone app and in its e-mail blasts; and the Anderson County Tourism Commission would be mentioned on any collateral the Kentucky Bourbon Trail organizers produce, Hoskins said.

Created in 1999, the Kentucky Bourbon Trail currently features Four Roses and Wild Turkey Distilleries in Lawrenceburg, Heaven Hill in Bardstown, Jim Beam in Clermont, Maker's Mark in Loretto, Town Branch in Lexington and Woodford Reserve in Versailles. Tourists who visit all seven distilleries and prove it by showing seven stamps in their Bourbon Trail "passport" receive a free T-shirt.

Marks and Epperson were both wearing last year's Bourbon Trail T-shirt during their brief Saturday stop at Wild Turkey.

Scaling back on print advertising in magazines in the Cincinnati and Indiana area, the Anderson County Tourism Commission needed to "go with what works," Hoskins said.

Bourbon. "We know that people are coming to Lawrenceburg, and once they get here, we have so much to offer," Hoskins said of Kentucky Bourbon Trail traffic.

Bourbon trail attendees enjoy an outdoor tasting at Wild Turkey Distillery on Saturday. According to Visitor Center Manager Courtney Clare, the distillery hopes to be able to conduct tours by July from its new multi-million dollar visitor center overlooking the Kentucky River.

Hoskins, who works full-time as the general manager at the Lawrenceburg Best Western hotel, said most of the hotel's heightened leisure traffic in the fall and summer is because of the Bourbon Trail.

According to the Kentucky Bourbon Trail's website, more than 500,000 people visited Kentucky Bourbon Trail distilleries in 2012.

Local people aren't seeing tourism advertising because that's not where the commission wants to advertise to promote Anderson County, she said.

Tourism is about bringing new people in, Hoskins said, and that's where the commission's time and money should be spent.

"Sometimes it's hard for individual citizens to gauge what tourism is actually doing," Hoskins said.

A paid tourism director, who would oversee the paperwork involved with the Bourbon Trail sponsorship, should help tourism commission members complete projects more quickly, she said.

The tourism commission board has discussed responsibilities and salary for the new director, but has not finalized what the director's duties will be or how much he or she would be paid, according to Hoskins.

"The director position is important to see what direction we're going in," Hoskins said, adding she believes the position will be advertised and filled within the next month.

Volunteer members of the Anderson County Tourism Commission are chairman Magen Hoskins of Best Western, Katrina Egbert of Wild Turkey Distillery, Jackson Horton of the Law-

Tourism board plans to hire paid director

According to Tourism Commission Chair Magen Hoskins, the Anderson County Tourism Commission has been discussing the job description and salary compensation for a paid tourism director.

"Especially with the new sponsorship, we're going to have a lot going on," Hoskins said.

According to Hoskins, the commission has not yet voted on a final job description or salary for a potential tourism director, but held "an informal, working meeting to discuss how to move forward with the director position" two weeks ago.

The Tourism Commission — which is funded by the hotel tax with budgetary oversight from the Anderson County fiscal court — would be paying for the director's salary from its total $50,000 in funds, including additional surplus from last year.

The commission has not had a tourism director since 2011, according to Hoskins.

"We made that decision mainly because we're all volunteers, we don't have a paid position," she said. "We felt like the projects we were taking on were taking a little too long to complete."

The tourism commission voted to meet every other month during a commission meeting in August 2012, according to the tourism commission's meeting minutes.

Let the debate begin

Well now, about the only thing left for college basketball in this state is for someone suit up a team from Waddy U. just to split the difference between Kentucky and Louisville. Two years and two champions just down the road from each other. Maybe a team from Alton or Tyrone can join them? Really, though, what a run for the Commonwealth the last two years and it might just continue. Congrats to the Louisville Cardinals, a team that had the one trait all great clubs, no matter what the sport, have. It wasn't the constant pressure defense that set Louisville apart. Nor was it a highly efficient offense.

Louisville had the great camaraderie in which the Cardinals put the team ahead of the individual. Even if you are the bluest of the blue bloods, you have to admit the Cardinals were a team in every sense of the word.

Ironically, that bond in the fan bases puts a sharp divider in the Commonwealth.

Blue? Eight national titles, more wins than any other program and unparalleled tradition that rules at least 117 counties in the state.

Red? That's ancient history. The current big trophy now resides in the 'Ville.

Aren't rivalries lovely?

And now, for another 365 days, we can turn our attention to the real argument to determine if the ultimate college crown, 21st Century version, really resides inside New Circle Road or the Watterson Expressway.

One-and-done. Play-or-stay.

If you need an explanation, you aren't paying attention.

Is it better to bring in unbelievably talented freshman classes, knowing they see college not as a path to a career in business or medicine as much as a place to hone his ability to handle the rock on the way to paying for pay?

That's the Calipari way at UK. Or at least that is the rap against him.

Or is it better to play-and-stay?

Is it better to hang around college for several years to grow as a person and a basketball player?

That is the Rick Pitino way at Louisville. Or at least it is for now. Whether it remains so will depend on what several of the Cards' returning starters really want to do.

Really, though, those neat little stereotypes so many want to slap on both programs are not completely accurate, especially if any of the Cardinals not named Peyton Siva elects to leave school and play for pay next fall.

UK doesn't win last year without 4-year player Darius Miller, Louisville doesn't win this year without sophomore Chane Behanan.

But we will play along anyway.

Louisville will certainly become the poster team for those criticizing building and rebuilding a team every year through reloading at McDonald's. Of course, focusing on this year's fiasco in Lexington alone conveniently overlooks that Kentucky won it last year, was in the Final Four two years ago and made the Elite Eight the year before.

Louisville, of course, made the Final Four last year, and got its own big trophy Monday night. And while certainly not NBA ready after one year, Siva, Behanan and Wayne Blackshear were burger boys, too.

So you can try to argue one system or the other all you want. Both schools have multiple Final Fours, both have a title.

As for me, I would prefer lottery pick talent that stays four years. But that ain't gonna happen.

I just wish I can find a way to be in Rupp Arena next December when the last two championship programs have their annual Armageddon.

Anderson track leaps into new season

By John Herndon
Sports Editor

Anderson County is looking to make a giant leap during this year's high school track season.

Literally.

"We come in and jump," Anderson coach Robert Meacham says with a grin. "We compete in the jumping events."

Indeed. The Bearcats jump long. They jump high. They triple jump and they pole vault. Anderson has at least one who could be contending for a berth in the state meet or a regional championship next month.

That is not to say Anderson does not have some strong performers in other events - the Bearcats and Lady Bearcats have several runners and throwers who could be competing when the state meet gets under way at the University of Louisville. But Anderson has talented performers who could contend for a state berth in nearly every jumping event.

That is quite a change from 2012, as junior Tiffany Yount, a long jumper, is Anderson's only returning state qualifier.

"This year, we are going to have a lot more," says Meacham, who has returned to the head coaching sport after spending a year as an assistant coach.

Meacham served as Anderson's head track coach in 2010-11, but stepped down last year when his teaching position was eliminated. Meacham wanted to stay close to the Anderson program but was teaching at Fort Knox High School. Meacham, who is nationally certified to coach pole vault, worked with those participating in that event a year ago.

He resumed head coaching duties this year, replacing Adam Turner, but Meacham is working full-time in the Franklin County school system.

Bearcats explode in fourth to beat Shelby

SHELBYVILLE - Good teams will make you pay for extra outs, according to the old diamond truth.

A Shelby County error prolonged the top of the fourth inning and Anderson County showed why it feels it is becoming a good team Monday night.

The Lady Bearcats had seven consecutive batters reach base - six of them scored - in the decisive inning on their way to a 7-0 win in a key 30th District matchup at the Shelby County athletic complex.

After the first two Anderson batters made easy outs, freshman designated player Courtney-Gale Hawkins reached on what should have been a routine ground out. It was a miscue that opened the Lady Bearcat flood gates.

Alissa Vest followed with double that drove in pinch runner Trista Craigmyle. Madison Brummett then tripled to score vest. By the time the Lady Bearcats were through, they had effectively put things away.

"I thought we had hit the ball pretty hard the first few innings, but we hit a lot of balls right at them," Anderson coach Brian Glass said. "I don't know how many hard balls we hit, but we are going to keep swinging the bats."

Anderson had a hit in each of the first three innings and had connected on the nose three other times in the first three frames but only held a 1-0 lead entering the decisive fourth. "Our main problem is that we don't come out on the field with confidence knowing that we can play the game and that we can beat teams. That is what leads to our mistakes," Shelby County coach Kelly Cable said.

Anderson County baseball showed it is far too early to write the Bearcats off in 2013.

A week after mustering one hit in two games, the Bearcats rolled past Louisville Eastern and Bowling Green to take two of three games in the Bowling Green/Warren County Invitational.

Anderson did have trouble against Ballard Memorial, mustering just three hits in a 3-1 loss.

Hawkins had doubled home Marissa Walker in the second and finished with two hits. Eighth-grade catcher Bailey Curry paced Anderson with three hits, including a two-run single in the fourth. Junior center-fielder Molly Burkhead also picked up two hits for the Lady Bearcats who reached three Shelby pitchers for 11 hits. Six different Anderson players drove in runs.

Meanwhile, Shelby only managed leadoff singles from Sydney Wright in the first and Ariana Jones in the second before the bats went silent. The Lady Rockets managed just two base runners - both on walks issued by reliever Mia Aldridge - and never had a runner past second base the entire game against Aldridge and starter Ally Moore, both freshmen.

Both teams move on to the rugged Capital City Classic at Franklin County this weekend, while Anderson returns to Shelbyville on Monday, April 15 to play Collins in a matchup that could decide the top seed in the 30th District Tournament.

"I didn't address before the game that this was a district game," Glass said. "We are young and are going to have to approach every game like it is our last."

"I know Collins had some (graduation) losses from last year but I don't really know much about them."

As for Shelby, Cable feels her team will also be in the thick of things when tournament time rolls around. "I feel like (the district) is pretty much anybody's to win. You can't count anybody out."

Lady Bearcat softball splits two in Alabama

From staff reports

Anderson County softball continues to be impressive early in the season, despite losing its first game of the year during its annual spring break trek to the beaches of Gulf Shores, Ala.

The Lady Bearcats split two games, defeating Baldwin County but losing to Spanish Fort, both from Alabama, where teams have been playing since late February.

Against Baldwin County, Bailey Curry smacked three hits and Madison Brummett drove in three runs in a 9-2 win for the Lady Bearcats last Tuesday.

Anderson spotted Baldwin County a 1-0 lead after an inning, but tallied six runs over the next three at-bats to take control. Anderson added three more insurance runs in the sixth for the Lady Bearcats' sixth straight win to open the season.

The Lady Bearcats took advantage of eight Baldwin County errors.

Freshman Ally Moore went five innings, striking out four, to claim the win. Moore combined with classmate Mia Aldridge to scatter seven hits.

Thursday, the Lady Bearcats tasted defeat for the first time as Spanish Fort, which finished fourth in the Alabama Class 5A state tournament last year, scored twice in both the fifth and sixth innings to overcome Anderson, 4-1.

Anderson was charged with four errors as Moore gave up four unearned runs.

Marissa Walker led Anderson with two hits.

Another scheduled game, against Daphne, Ala., was canceled at the last minute. Glass said Anderson showed up to play only to find that Daphne had called the game off. "I was not very happy at that moment," Glass said.

BOYS

Against Eastern, Anderson capitalized on a pair of first-inning errors to plate five runs in an 11-4 win. Josh Brown got the big hit in the inning, driving a double to the gap in left-center to drive in Shea Sparrow and Granville Hayes. Max Crabtree also drove in two first-inning runs with a single.

The Bearcats got three more in the bottom of the third when Dusty Puckett reached on a two-out error and later scored as five consecutive Bearcats reached base on four singles and a hit batter. Anderson put things out of reach in the fifth with Brice Stockton driving in two runs with a single. Anderson took advantage of four Eastern walks in the fifth-inning rally.

Lefty Brandon Eliadis picked up the win going five innings and giving up one earned run. Eliadis' off-speed pitches kept the Eagles off balance as he struck out six.

Connor Cotton pitched the final two innings in relief.

Ballard Memorial 3, Anderson Co. 1

Ballard Memorial, located near the Mississippi River in far western Kentucky, limited Anderson to three hits in the Bombers' 3-1 win at Bowling Green.

Brown pitched six innings of two-baseball but gave up a run in the first when Ballard Memorial's second hitter, Alek Hugen doubled, then came around to score on two wild pitches.

In the sixth, Hugen put Ballard Memorial ahead with a solo home run.

Ballard Memorial added an insurande run in the seventh off Cotton, again working in relief.

Hayes led the Anderson offense with two hits and drove in Tanner Roberts with the Bearcats' only run in the third.

"You have got to give all the credit to Ballard Memorial's pitcher, Clay Chandler. He had a dominant fastball and used his off-speed pitches really well," Anderson coach L.W. Barnes said.

Anderson Co. 6, Bowling Green 4

Stockton got the win and went 3-for-3 at the plate to lead the Bearcats to the impressive 6-4 win.

"Brice pretty much dominated the Purlples for his six innings pitched," Barnes said.

Offensively, Dusty Puckett went two-for-three and scored two runs with an RBI for the Bearcats.

Anderson to play Spencer, Shelby

The Bearcats' post-season fortunes will begin to take shape this week as the Bearcats travel to Spencer County Thursday and are scheduled to host Shelby County on Tuesday.

With the district tournament being seeded, the Spencer and Shelby games are, by far, the most important games on Anderson's schedule to date.

Spencer has opened the season at 8-3 and had won eight of nine games before falling to Reynoldsburg, Ohio in Fort Walton Beach, Fla. last week.

"It appears they are playing really well, and I think this is a team Coach (Steve) Slaughter has been looking forward to for some time. I'm sure they will be solid on all fronts," Barnes said.

Game time at Spencer is 5:30 p.m.

Brandon Eliadias went five innings and gave up one earned run in beating Eastern.

The Bearcats are scheduled to host Shelby County on Tuesday, April 16 at 8 p.m. Shelby has been a bit of a surprise at 14-1 and had 13 straight wins through Saturday.

The Bearcats have not had a home game yet due to delays in a field renovation, and at press time, the field was still not ready. However, Barnes said crews were working on the field Monday and he hopes to have it ready for the junior varsity and freshman games against Louisville Trinity on Friday, April 12.

TRACK

Meacham says newcomer Ross Cox and veteran Tyson Yett, both juniors, have enormous potential in the boys' high jump, while Yount and eighth-grader Alorra Sims give the Lady Bearcats a pair of big-time leapers.

Cox took first place in the highly-competitive Shelby County All-Comers meet with a 5-foot-10-inch effort in the high jump while Yett placed third. Cox also took the long jump (19-06.5) with Yett placing fourth.

Yett won the triple jump at the same meet, then came back in the Boyle County All-comers on March 29 to place second in the high jump while Cox finished third.

"I have been trying to get Ross to jump since he was a freshman," Meacham said. "What he did at Shelby (in Cox's first high school track competition) was not really a surprise. It was one of those situations where athletic ability took over."

Meacham fully expects Cox and Yett be among the regional leaders by the end of the season.

On the girls' side, Yount and Sims have also been very strong early, with Sims taking the triple jump at both Shelby and Boyle while Yount took the high jump at Shelby and has been among the leaders in all the jumping events early in the season.

"One thing I love about having two (contenders) in the events

is that we might not have a state champion or even the best athlete, but we have two," Meacham says with a wry grin. "Someone else might score 10 points (for first place) but if we get second and third, we score 14."

A team receives eight points for a second-place finish and six for a third.

Meacham Anderson has some other performers capable of big things, as well.

Freshman Connor Duncan set a state middle school record in the 300-meter hurdles and should be a regional contender in that event and the 110-meter event. "He's technically very sound, but what sets Connor apart is that he wants his name on the wall," Meacham said, referring to the all-time Anderson records posted in the school lobby.

"He has that drive and that is something I can't coach," Meacham says.

Meacham also expects big things from Casey Moninger, who runs the rare 400- and 800-meter double. "It is unusual because there is only one event between them," Meacham says. "I told Casey, 'We will try them out for you. Either you are going to be good at the 400 and decent at 800 or good at 800 and decent at 400.'"

"So I gave him some benchmarks of 53 seconds in the 400 and 2:15 in the 800. In his first meet, Casyhad a 53.4 and 2:16."

Meacham laughs. "I knew then that Casey could be something special."

Seventh-grader Ellie Buser is expected to be strong in the middle-distance events "Her times so far will compete in the region," Meacham says. "She loves to race."

Meacham says the Bearcats should get a boost from sophomore Connor Stockton in the shot put along with freshman Nathan McGregor in the discus.

Anderson undoubtedly has potential. Both the boys' and girls' teams finished second in the 11-team Shelby meet and fourth in the 13-team Boyle meet. But getting out of a rugged Class AAA (largest school) region that includes the Lexington public schools will be extremely difficult.

The Bearcats could have other performers develop as Meacham says better than 50 kids came out for the team. He feels the Bearcats can put together competitive relay teams that can score in the regional meet because of attention to technique.

He also has several

The North Hardin Invitational was to be a true test of just how good Anderson County track is and could be in 2013.

While the Bearcats did not come close to the host school's final point total, there were signs the Bearcats could live up to the expectations Coach Robert Meacham has put before them.

The Bearcat boys placed fifth in a meet that Meacham described as "loaded," despite Anderson not being at full strength due to several competitors still being out of town on Spring Break.

The Anderson girls' also competed, finishing eight.

It is unknown how spring break affected the other 14 schools competing.

Meacham noted that runner Casey Moninger had a big day in the 400-meters and in the 4x100-meter relay. "He ran a fantastic race," Meacham said of Moninger's effort in the 400.

In the shortest relay, Moninger replaced Ryan McGregor, who had been injured earlier in the meet. The Anderson team posted its best time since 2009 with a 46.76 clocking, good enough for fourth place. "That's an amazing time to be posting this early in the season with limited reps," Meacham said.

Anderson throwers Connor Stockton and Nathan McGregor both had big days. Stockton placed fourth in the shot put while McGregor was third in the discus throw.

Junior Ethan Woodrow had a personal record with a long jump of 18-00.5 that was good enough for fourth place while Jacob Brumley set personal records in both the 1600- and 3200-meter runs.

Many of Anderson's top performers did not participate in the event due to the school holiday last week. "With Spring Break going on, we were not at full strength as far as athletes that I was able to put on the track, but the kids that showed up performed very well amongst really tough competition," Meacham said.

who would be track's equivalent of "role players."

"Those are the kids I like to coach," Meacham says. "They have a personal record that is going to get better and they are going to show up for practice every day.

"I coach for the team. As much as track is an individual sport, I coach it as a team. I want one of those banners or trophies for the team. You don't get a trophy unless it is the team."

The City of Lawrenceburg, Kentucky hereby gives notice of a Public Meeting to be held from 6:00 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. EST on May 13, 2013 at City Hall located at 100 North Main Street, Lawrenceburg, KY. The purpose of the meeting is to inform the public of planned improvements to the sanitary sewer collection system and allow the public to review and comment on proposed activities, potential impacts and project alternatives. Planned improvements include construction of the Wet Weather Detention Facilities, including a 2.0 Million Gallon Wet Weather Detention Basin and Pump Station planned to be located on City property adjacent to the Public Works Maintenance Garage, 1070 Glensboro Road off of US 44. The Wet Weather Detention Basin is proposed to be an above ground concrete tank having a diameter of 120' and a height of 25'-2". Written comments received by the City of Lawrenceburg, KY, 100 North Main Street, Lawrenceburg, KY 40342 by 12 p.m. on May 13, 2013 will also be addressed before the project starts construction.
